American Academy of Nurse Practitioners Hosts 2008 Conference

AUSTIN (March 10) -- The American Academy of Nurse Practitioners (AANP), founded in 1985 as the first national professional organization for NPs of all specialties, will host their 2008 National Conference, June 26 thru July 1 at the Gaylord National on the Potomac Resort & Convention Center.

The conference includes a full slate of expert faculty presentations of current, practical, and clinically oriented evidence-based practice information in specialty areas such as acute care, adolescent/pediatric, adult/family, business/professional issues, gerontology, integrative medicine, men's health, occupational health, pharmacology, psychiatric/mental health, research, uniformed/military, and women's health.

State-of-the-art skills workshops and sessions on legislative, regulatory, and practice issues, and an exhibit hall filled with the latest products and services for the NP will all be held at this world-class resort hotel and convention center, located near Old Towne Alexandria, Georgetown, and the endless wonders of our nation's capital. To register for the conference or for more information, go to www.aanp.org and click on 2008 Conference.

AANP was founded in 1985 to provide NPs with a unified way to network and advocate for NP issues and is the largest and only full-service national professional membership organization for NPs of all specialties. AANP represents the interests of the more than 120,000 NPs currently practicing in the U. S. and continually advocates at local, state, and federal levels for the recognition of NPs as providers of high-quality, cost-effective, and personalized healthcare.
